II. Programme Aims: What will the programme allow you to achieve?

<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Enable students to develop bodies of knowledge in the content areas of the programme, to develop skills in differentiating the influence of local and global factors on management in the region, and to question existing assumptions about the Chinese business world. Equip students to research their own organisations, whether as academic researchers or consultants. 2. Help students to develop the following practical skills: Communicate effectively both orally and in writing; retrieve, sift and select information from a variety of sources; present seminar papers; listen and discuss ideas introduced during tutorials; practice formal and informal research techniques, using a wide range of data sources; and for students taking language electives, Chinese spoken and written language skills.

III. Programme Learning Outcomes: What will you learn on the programme?

There are four key areas in which you will develop:

Learning Outcomes: Knowledge
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Knowledge of international management and areas of expertise relevant to the practice of international management. 2. Knowledge of the skills practiced by Chinese managers when managing in an international context. 3. Knowledge of skills needed by non-Chinese when working with Chinese managers and in the Chinese business world (including China, Hong Kong and Taiwan). 4. The programme puts emphasis on how far the practice of management in the region is influenced by local economic, legal, cultural, political and institutional factors, and how far by global factors.
Typical Teaching Methods	Typical Assessment Methods
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Acquisition of knowledge and skills through lectures, tutorials and seminars. Students are required to attend all classes and study extensively on their own. • In tutorials students are encouraged to develop their own interpretations of the available data.

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Students are offered a range of departmental seminars in topics of finance and management. • Students can attend at least three one-on-one supervisions in preparation for writing their dissertations.

General statement on contact hours – postgraduate programmes
Masters programmes (with the exception of two-year full-time MAs) consist of 180 credits, made up of taught modules of 30 or 15 credits, taught over 10 or 20 weeks, and a dissertation of 60 credits. The programme structure shows which modules are compulsory and which optional. As a rough guide, 1 credit equals approximately 10 hours of work. Most of this will be independent study (see https://www.soas.ac.uk/admissions/ug/teaching/) such as reading and research, preparing coursework, revising for examinations and so on. Also included is class time, for example lectures, seminars and other classes. Some subjects may have more class time than others – a typical example of this are language acquisition modules. At SOAS, most postgraduate modules have a one-hour lecture and a one-hour seminar every week, but this does vary. More information can be found on individual module pages.
