II. Programme Aims: What will the programme allow you to achieve?

<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. A sound knowledge and understanding of selected approaches, methods and theories in relation to one or more areas of Buddhist Asia.</li> <li>2. Advanced skills in researching and writing about Buddhism from an academic perspective, also as a platform for further research at doctoral level.</li> <li>3. Advanced skills in presentation or communication of knowledge and understanding of topics in religious studies.</li> <li>4. Specialisation in one area from among those covered by the units listed in the programme structure.</li> </ol>
---

III. Programme Learning Outcomes: What will you learn on the programme?

There are four key areas in which you will develop:

Learning Outcomes: Knowledge
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Students will learn how to assess data and evidence critically, locate and synthesise source materials, critically evaluate conflicting interpretations and sources, use research resources (library catalogues, journal databases, citation indices) and other traditional sources.</li> <li>2. Subject specific skills, for instance, textual criticism, edition, translation, and interpretation of literary, epigraphical, and ethnographic sources, as well as analysis of archaeological and art-historical artefacts.</li> <li>3. Whenever appropriate, students will enhance their knowledge of one Buddhist language, or gain familiarity with one of these languages, freely chosen among a wide pool on offer.</li> <li>4. Students will gain familiarity with Buddhism in its various regional and historical contexts, and with the academic field of Buddhist Studies, its rich history and the variety of academic perspectives on Buddhism.</li> </ol>
Typical Teaching Methods	Typical Assessment Methods
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Acquisition through lectures and seminars. Students are required to attend all classes, study extensively on their own and prepare non-assessed work (for presentation at course seminars) regularly.</li> <li>• Acquisition through preparation of essays and dissertations.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Students will be assessed by a variety of methods: long essays, seen or unseen examinations, group or individual presentations, coursework and a dissertation (the dissertation is a required method of assessment for the MA).</li> </ul>

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Acquisition through taking optional courses in the study of the religions of Asia or Africa.</li> </ul>

Learning Outcomes: Intellectual (thinking) skills
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Students should become precise and cautious in their assessment of evidence, and understand through practice what documents can and cannot tell us.</li> <li>Students will develop the capacity to discuss theoretical and epistemological issues in an articulate, informed, and intellectual manner.</li> <li>Students will learn to become precise and critical in their assessment of scholarly arguments and to question interpretations, however authoritative, in order to reassess evidence for themselves.</li> <li>Students will learn to present complex arguments clearly and creatively.</li> <li>Those students who take a language option should be able to assess primary sources in foreign languages and critically evaluate interpretations proposed by different scholars.</li> <li>Students will acquire both theoretical and regional expertise in order to develop and apply sound academic approaches to the study of Buddhism.</li> </ol>
Typical Teaching Methods	Typical Assessment Methods
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Acquisition of all skills will be fostered directly through the programme's core options and indirectly through both the additional options, and supervision of the students' dissertations.</li> <li>The development of intellectual skills will be facilitated through lectures and seminars, and students' progress will be monitored through close assessment and supervision of coursework as well as through non-assessed seminar presentations. All courses will introduce information that will need to be assessed critically and will demonstrate how conflicting interpretations arise from the same information. By the acquisition of language skills, students will be enabled to assess primary sources in foreign languages.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The emphasis on assessed written work (by essay and examination) is in order to ensure advanced level training in skilled cognitive argumentation as a core contribution to preparation for further postgraduate study at the MPhil/PhD level.</li> </ul>

Learning Outcomes: Subject-based practical skills
The programme aims to help students with the following practical skills: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Academic writing</li> <li>IT-based information retrieval and processing</li> <li>Presentational skills</li> <li>Independent study skills and research techniques</li> <li>Reflexive learning</li> </ol>
Typical Teaching Methods	Typical Assessment Methods
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Acquisition of academic writing skills through the preparation of long essays and the dissertation.</li> <li>Acquisition of information retrieval skills through course teaching and training</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Seen or unseen examinations, essays, group or individual presentations, dissertation.</li> </ul>

sessions offered by the Library and Information Services staff. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Acquisition of presentational skills through seminar and tutorial presentations.</li> <li>• Acquisition of examination techniques through training sessions offered by the Learning and Teaching Unit.</li> <li>• Acquisition of independent study skills and research techniques through supervised individual research and writing (dissertation and long essays).</li> <li>• Acquisition of reflexive learning through seminar discussion and supervised coursework.</li> </ul>

General statement on contact hours – postgraduate programmes
Masters programmes (with the exception of two-year full-time MAs) consist of 180 credits, made up of taught modules of 30 or 15 credits, taught over 10 or 20 weeks, and a dissertation of 60 credits. The programme structure shows which modules are compulsory and which optional. As a rough guide, 1 credit equals approximately 10 hours of work. Most of this will be independent study (see https://www.soas.ac.uk/admissions/ug/teaching/) such as reading and research, preparing coursework, revising for examinations and so on. Also included is class time, for example lectures, seminars and other classes. Some subjects may have more class time than others – a typical example of this are language acquisition modules. At SOAS, most postgraduate modules have a one-hour lecture and a one-hour seminar every week, but this does vary. More information can be found on individual module pages.
